in 1995 the fiftieth anniversary of the end of the second world war occasioned many reflections on the place of science and technology in the conflict that the war ended with allied victory in the pacific theatre inevitably focussed attention upon the pacific region and particularly upon the manhattan project and its outcome it was in the pacific that western physics and engineering gave birth to the atomic age however the pacific war had also proved a testing time and a testing space for other disciplines and institutions extreme environments and opemotional distances and the fundamental demands of logistics required the allies and the japanese to innovate many scientific and technological practices just as medicine and botany were called upon to fight tropical diseases and insect pests so engineers anthropol ogists and geographers were called upon to understand local conditions and cli mates and to work with local peoples whose traditional lives were changed forever by the experience at the same time the war played midwife to a host of new de velopments not least in scientific intelligence and in chemical and biological weapons which were to acquire far greater importance after 1945

over the past five decades the field of religion and science scholarship has experienced a considerable expansion this volume explores the historical and contemporary perspectives of the relationship between religion technology and science with a focus on south and east asia these three areas are not seen as monolithic entities but as discursive fields embedded in dynamic processes of cultural exchange and transformation bridging these arenas of knowledge and practice traditionally seen as distinct and disconnected the book reflects on the ways of exploring the various dimensions of their interconnection through its various chapters the collection provides an examination of the use of modern scientific concepts in the theologies of new religious organizations and challenges the traditional notions of space by western scientific conceptions in the 19th century it looks at the synthesis of ritual elements and medical treatment in china and india and at new funeral practices in japan it discusses the intersections between contemporary western buddhism modern technology and global culture and goes on to look at women s rights in contemporary pakistani media using case studies grounded in carefully delineated temporal and regional frameworks chapters are grouped in two sections one on religion and science and another on religion and technology illustrating the manifold perspectives and the potential for further research and discussion this book is an important contribution to the studies of asian religion science and technology and religion and philosophy many people are admirers of science and are eager to know more about it but are woefully unaware of why that knowledge is so powerful that lack of understanding can be exploited by those with harmful agendas to sow doubt about the validity of the consensus conclusions arrived at by scientists about issues of major importance this book s explanation of why the theories of science work so well without being true may not only surprise them it would also enable them to counter harmful anti science agendas and provide practical benefits by enabling them to make much better judgments about issues in their everyday lives
